What was once considered an activity that very few adolescents and young adults participated in has become more commonplace among teens, particularly those who are of high school age.